Passburg Hotel

Destroyed by Fire

The Passburg hotel was totally destroyed with all its contents this morning.

As the telephone connection is interrupted, we are unable up to time of going to press to obtain full particulars, but as far as we can learn, the fire started from an unknown origin at an early hour, and the house was reduced to ashes in a very few minutes. A very high westerly wind was blowing at the time, and as Passburg has no fire-fighting appliances, all efforts would prove futile.

With difficulty, the near-by store and dwelling belonging to Kerr Bros., the Fowler pool-hall, and other adjacent buildings were saved.

We understand that but very little insurance was carried on either the hotel or its contents, and the loss is a very severe one to Mr. Duncan. Most of the guests lost all their belongings, not having time to get them out.

The Passburg hotel was built about six years ago, at a cost of upwards of $20,000. The house was well furnished, and equipped with a modern heating system. A stable and enclosed stood about thirty feet from the rear of the hotel.
These escaped the fiery elements.

Anglican Church Notes

On Sunday next, Nov. 28th, service will be held at 11 a.m. as usual, and will be conducted by Rev. H. Clay. The subject of the sermon will be "The first five minutes after death." Holy Communication will be celebrated at the close of the service.

A most enjoyable entertainment took place last week in the Odd-fellows' hall. A good audience was present and a varied programme was well received. Songs were rendered by Mrs. F. Wright,
Mr. Jos. Holloway and Rev. Mr.
Clay. A special word of praise is due to the elder girls of St. Albans'.
Coleman, under Mrs. F. Graham's direction, for the clever contribution consisting of humorous sketches, recitations and patriotic drills.

Kaiser Shed Tears

"No Hope for Final Redemption of France"

A despatch from Basle, Switzerland, to Le Temps says that a South German Socialist named Anton Fendrich has been captured by the Germans in his retreat at the battlefield in northern France. Fendrich expresses belief in the success of the war, but fears that peace will not come before the rupture of last year.

"Concluding the French," says the writer, "the emperor does what he did at first, to conquer their resistance. Like other tanks, they held too high an opinion of the French. Their tanks are making war full of nameless horror, of the most frightful acts, which can only be recounted by those who have seen them."

"During the half-hour's interview the emperor, despite his repugnance, recounted facts the truth of which no one could believe, facts that under solemn oath, and which leave no hope whatever of the final redemption of France."

With tears in his eyes, Kaiser returned to France to a doomed country. Fendrich adds:

"These tanks expressed shame as well as grief at such demoralization in a people which had always been as chivalrous and noble, but had now become the victim of a fixed mind."

The Kaiser ended by saying that a consequence of the war would be the unification of all power in the hands of the emperor, so that he would become apt for the historic task incumbent upon her as the heart of Europe, and lay the foundation for a new European humanity.

On the Safe Side

Sir Robert Borden's statement that the British war office is prepared to obtain 100,000 machine guns and 100,000 guns in Canada for delivery within the next two years goes to show that Britain's war effort is being well planned.

The number of machine guns to be used in the near future is being decided in the near future. A miscalculation as to the probable duration of the conflict is said to have led to the present situation.

Their creation of a large extent handicapped the allied campaign last spring. Any future error in calculating the number to be used will be disastrous.

The new scale of British preparations, both as regards the number of machine guns required and the fact of war, will be decided when the facts of war, munitions, armies with it. If the assurance that the allies are not going to fall from lack of appreciation of the magnitude of the task they have laid—Sydney Post.

Just a Well Enlist at Once

The following story in regard to the British Regulars has been told. It appears that a young man not only refused to fill up his paper, but crumpled it up and hung it back in the emperor's face with the defiant statement that no power on earth would ever induce him to answer the questions put to him. The emperor, like a wise military commander, sought reinforcements.

When he returned with an inspection party, he was told that the young man was out. He had gone to the town hall to enlist.

As Abraham Lincoln pointed out long ago, men of military age who have a conscientious objection to being compelled to defend their country or arms can get out of the difficulty by volunteering.

Aspiric Wood Rangers

Forest fires in the woods of northern Alberta were started by an airman who travels in a flying boat. Heretofore the view a ranger had of the surrounding forest was limited to the top of the hill or of a 60 foot tower. The airman recently discovered a fire 30 miles away and gave its location and extent. His information was passed with money but with its labor, exerted its most intense form, means everything.

Does Farming Pay

Venture of Two Medicine Hat Men Would Indicate That It Does

The following account of the success of two Medicine Hat men is from the Canadian Farmer.

Twelve thousand dollars that grew into more than a hundred thousand within six months is a good record for a year's work, but it is more doubtful to these day.

Two Medicine Hat men have done it, and they did not have to sell a lot to do it.

Down near Bowell, a short distance out of Medicine Hat, there is a $400 acre tract owned by the Canadian Woolen Mills Co. Ltd. This tract was cropped to 6,000 acres, but the crop did not materialize, the grain barely sprouting and then withering in the winter.

In the winter of 1914-15 several people looked at this land with a view of buying it. It is a good piece of land, but the owner decided not to do so themselves. Banks refused to finance the venture. A prominent Canadian woolen manufacturer, whose name I do not know, approached and refused, other financiers looked into the matter, and it did not look good.

The two Medicine Hat business men, F. M. Glithner and W. B. Finlay, decided to speculate with it. They had no extra money and they rustled up $10,000. The result of their work was approached and refused, and it did not look good.

The Kaiser ended by saying that a consequence of the war would be the unification of all power in the hands of the emperor, so that he would become apt for the historic task incumbent upon her as the heart of Europe, and lay the foundation for a new European humanity.

German Socialists

As to the staunch little band of German Socialists who, dare to declare for the brotherhood of man, demand the abolition of private property, and stand out against the aggressive demands of their own country, are these brave hearts in all respects? At home they are revolutionaries, but abroad they stand up against the aggressions of their own country.

From his brother Socialists in France and England they receive small help. Will their loyalty be rewarded? We have seen the German soldiers and also recruits, by the persecutions they suffer. One day they will be received as heroes, the next as traitors.

When Germany becomes liberal they will be powerful in cabinet and legislature. It is not beyond the bounds of credulity that one of them may live to be president of a republic.

Sound Farming Methods

Horse Sense is Needed for Proper Farming Operation

The following article is from a bulletin issued by the U.S. department of agriculture.

That to make a money-maker of a farm, it has become a losing proposition through steady grain farming you must:

- 1.—Grow legumes, alfalfa, sweet clover, vetches, cowpeas, red clover, or white clover, according to your soil and location.
- 2.—Raise livestock as a side line that will not compete with grain, straw and the like, holding down your grain sales and keeping up fertility.
- 3.—Keep accounts or records and expense account, including figures for gueswork as to whether you are making money or not on each crop.

—Mix horse sense with scientific agriculture—thus adapting the new methods to changes in market, weather, and soil.

Given a run-down farm, the best and shortest cut to enduring and profitable fertility is through legumes and livestock. To do this, the short-cut rules in handling the soil:

- 1.—Establish a sound and regular rotation of crops.
- 2.—Use your crops to suit your soil.
- 3.—Soil your plowing to your soil.
- 4.—Manure as regularly as you harvest.

Don't plow when the soil is wet. Such plowing puddles the earth and when it dries the sun bakes the clods to brick.

Keep one grain crop on the same field year after year. Have a rotation which will include legumes. Turn up your rotation when clover falls. Fill in with soy beans or cowpeas.

Don't pasture fields in winter when wet. Let the stock eat the feed when it is dry, and when the weather keeps the stock in the feed yard.

Don't, as a rule, follow a shallow-rooted crop with another shallow-rooted crop.

Don't fail to save and put back on the soil every wisp of straw and cover crop that you can.

Don't let the soil rest with the idea that nature will make good the results of man's mistakes. Keep the soil in work.

The farmer who lets his soil to get the crop to ridge for a fall. The farmer who follows a shallow-rooted method in agriculture, is misusing the modern farmer's best bet.

The farmer who farms merely to get a crop, and who fails to take care of his land had been a failure the year before and the ground was broken and worked the speculators decided to do the same thing. They took things into consideration. They knew the ground had been well prepared for the crop, and had a reasonably small failure. They counted much molasses from the late fall rains and winter snows.

They needed 3,000 acres in wheat, 1,000 in oats and rye, the total cost being about $7,000 per acre. They had 10,000 bushels of wheat for seed.

Moreover, the farmer who is too crabbed or suspicious to get together with his neighbors to do what is naturally what no one can do alone, is sure to pay dearly for his lack of confidence and his incapacity for team work.

It Burns Pain Away

—There is no pain so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil.

Electric oil is a product of the Canadian Woolen Mills Co. Ltd., Victoria, B.C.

It is made clear that roses are growing successfully in Canada. Mr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturalist, has been instrumental in getting together in the preparation of this publication, and have given the results of years of experimental work.

The grower has been successful in raising the modern farmer's best bet.

A Ruined Prophet

Here is a good example of the prophet whose reputation has been ruined by the war. Last New Year's Eve, although apparently in the usual body variation that may be found in the human race, he was a success in Canada. Mr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturalist, has been instrumental in getting together in the preparation of this publication, and have given the results of years of experimental work.

FRANK

E. Marple.
The above is subject to addition and correction. The Town of Frank, besides having so large an honor roll, has donated $1000 for a machine gun, and through the efforts of Mrs. Drumm, has raised through the sale of buttons and flags $100 and proceeds from an afternoon tea $20, total $300, for the Blairmore branch of the Red Cross Society. The recently organized branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is also raising monthly nearly $400, sufficient to look after the dependants of our soldiers. The local Red Cross branch already has a large membership, all full-pledged workers. On Trafalgar Day Frank contributed the sum of $60 to the British Red Cross.

The above lists may be incomplete, and we will welcome any necessary additions or corrections. We also ask for a list from Coleman and Bellevue in order to complete The Pass list.
